Summary

As an experienced Product Manager, I have a proven track record of success in the computer software industry. I have extensive experience in managing the full life cycle of software development, including requirements gathering, design, coding, testing, and debugging. Additionally, I have in-depth expertise in a variety of technologies, including blockchain applications, web development, and desktop application development.

I have demonstrated success in leading the development of decentralized applications and smart contract development, ensuring that the resulting software is secure, reliable, and user-friendly. Additionally, my experience in ceramic engineering provides me with a unique perspective and knowledge of refractory materials and their applications.

In my role as a Product Manager, I have successfully managed teams of skilled and unskilled manpower, utilizing my leadership and management skills to guide them to successful project completion. With a diverse skill set and experience, I am confident that I would be a valuable asset to any team in the software industry.
